PROFESSOR: Dr. Patricia Murphy

REGISTRATION: LIMITED TO 30

UNLIMITED _____

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

An introduction to moral agency and decision-making as understood by the Catholic moral tradition in light of a new evangelization. As in Christian Ethics I, Veritatis Splendor (VS) will serve as point of departure and guide for consideration of such topics as: freedom and responsibility, conscience, the sources of morality and elements of moral decision making, principles of double effect and cooperation, virtue, vice and etc. Readings, lectures, discussions, short papers, quizzes, journal work and final written exam.

CLASS OBJECTIVES:

- Articulate a positive vision for contemporary Catholic moral teaching – one that responds to the question “why be moral?” and to the desires of the human heart for truth and goodness¹
- Explain what is distinctive about Christian ethics (the connections among Christian faith, the spiritual life and the moral life)
- Identify key features of a Christian anthropology and demonstrate understanding of the nature of moral agency (freedom and responsibility)
- Explain the relationship between freedom and law and the meanings of “autonomy,” “heteronomy” and “participated theonomy” according to VS
- Explain the teaching of VS on conscience (how it functions, vincible and invincible ignorance, formation, etc.) and distinguish it from erroneous views of conscience
- Explain the teaching of VS on the sources of morality (with special attention to the object of the moral act and moral absolutes)
- Compare and critically evaluate different methods of moral reasoning, (e.g. proportionalist or revisionist and those consistent with VS)
- Explain the principles of double effect and cooperation and apply them to cases
- Analyze contemporary ethical questions according to the principles of Catholic of moral reasoning
- Discuss the role of virtues (acquired and infused) in the moral life today

¹ Course outcomes are designed to assist students in meeting various program outcomes, especially MDIV outcomes in the areas of: “cultural context,” “personal-spiritual growth,” “religious heritage,” and “capacity for ministerial and public leadership”

- Discuss the main elements of the teaching on sin in the Catholic moral tradition
- Discuss the pastoral significance of the above
