TITLE: The Psalms

TERM: September – December 2018 [20189]

PROFESSOR: Rev. Frederick Y. Chung

REGISTRATION: LIMITED TO 30

UNLIMITED _____

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

The Psalter can be viewed as a distillation of Israel's history, Torah, spirituality, liturgy, messianic hopes, and wisdom. This course will examine some of the key elements of Hebrew poetry exemplified by the Psalms. In the study of the Psalms according to their literary forms or genres, their unique poetic and thematic features will be highlighted. Some consideration will be given to thematic groupings of Psalms such as Creation Psalms and Penitential Psalms. The spirituality of the Psalms will be explored both through Patristic literature and modern authors; messianic and Christological reading of the Psalms will be considered. This course will also begin exploring Wisdom Literature with which the Psalter has traditionally been associated in the Writings/Ketubim.

CLASS OBJECTIVES:

After engaging in the class discussions and assignments, the student is expected to:

- Learn skills in research, exegetical writing, and participating in discussions.
- Develop an appreciation for the poetry of the Psalms, their structure, and literary forms; appreciate their association with liturgy and music; make intertextual links to other passages of the Old Testament and New Testament; and consider the perspective of Jewish and Patristic authors.
- Apply the spiritual and theological themes of the Psalms to his/her personal journey and prayer life, finding a common language or "voice" for interior experiences.
- Grow in understanding of the Psalter's significance in communal singing, Lectionary preaching, and the reciting of the Liturgy of the Hours.

PREREQUISITES: Introduction to the Old Testament
